Maxine Katz, MA

Career Counselor, JEVS Human Services

Maxine Katz has over 30 years of professional experience in all aspects of human resources and career counseling in both the corporate and not for profit sectors. With core competencies in change management, organization and program design and development, she has managed groups of HR professionals globally in fast paced, fluid environments.

Successfully translating her corporate experience to the philanthropic sector, Ms. Katz is currently a Career Counselor with JEVS Human Services in Philadelphia. She has developed and now coordinates and runs a program that delivers career counseling, advice and support to women who are unemployed or underemployed. She also provides general career counseling to a broader population.

Previously, Ms. Katz was a managing director of a major, global financial institution responsible for the delivery of all human resources services as well as an internal human resources management consulting group. As director of HR for a New York based philanthropy, she developed and implemented an HR strategy to achieve an organizational redesign.

As a former member of the Board of Advisors to Cornell University's Human Resource and Management Development Programs, Ms. Katz was a frequent member of the executive panel reviewing case studies with class participants. She has lectured on change management to global HR executives and been a guest lecturer at the New School University.

Ms. Katz's active community involvement includes volunteering with NOVA and the Anne Silverman Community Health Clinic in Doylestown and serving as Board Chair of SOWN in Philadelphia.

Ms. Katz has a BA in Psychology and a MA in Sociology.
